MEDIA ADVISORY

OPERATIONS TO RETURN TO NORMAL

--Seasonal temperatures return

--Cooling facilities to cease operations

--Monitor www.sparetheair.com for the latest conditions

- Cooler daytime and nighttime temperatures have returned to the Sacramento area. The forecast by the National Weather Service predicts that area temperatures will be seasonal. Poor air quality from regional fires remains a concern.
- Cooling centers in the area will close. Facilities that provided this service will return to normal operating hours.
- County health officials are reminding area residents to monitor the Spare the Air web site for the latest information on air quality. This information can be found at www.sparetheair.com. If you need a break from the smoky conditions some options are shopping malls, community centers, and public libraries. Public health information can be found at www.scph.com.
- For information and referrals regarding any social service need, residents can call 2-1-1. Within the City of Sacramento, residents can call 3-1-1 for information and services.
